

Perhaps one of the most poignant reminders of the Civil War is located in Rose Hill Cemetery, Cumberland. There, in a small grassy area, stands the statue of the Union soldier. Around the statue are graves of soldiers who were killed during the war. The gravestones are gray and worn with age. Nearby on a rise stands an obelisk dedicated to the Confederate war dead. Both of these monuments stand as reminders, not only of the politics of the war, but of the simple fact that rich or poor, brave or frightened, men of one nation lost their lives in battle.
